

What Is A Fisher House:

The Rocky Mountain Fisher House is “a home away from home” for families of veterans or active duty military receiving medical care at the Denver VA Medical Center or an authorized facility.

The house is approximately 7,000 square feet, built and donated by the Fisher House Foundation to the Secretary of Veterans Affairs. The house is operated and maintained by the Denver VA. The house provides nine suites, professionally furnished and decorated in the tone and style of the local region. The house provides a common kitchen, laundry facilities, spacious dining room and an inviting living room with library and toys for children.

Who Is Eligible to Stay At A Fisher House:

Families of honorably discharged veterans or active duty military members who are receiving medical treatment for an illness, disease or injury at the VA or an approved facility and who live outside a fifty mile radius of Denver may stay at the house. Families do not pay to stay at a Fisher House. Fees are underwritten by the Denver Fisher House Foundation.
